POSTPONEMENT OF THE BANKNOTE 2020 CONFERENCE

March 10th 2020

Dear Delegate,

As the Coronavirus continues to spread globally, we have made the difficult, but necessary decision to postpone the Banknote 2020 conference. The safety and health of our delegates, sponsors, and staff is of primary importance to us, and holding this global conference in the midst of the Coronavirus outbreak, which has now affected Washington DC, is not something we wanted to risk. We also have made this decision to ensure that you will still experience the exceptional networking environment and rich discussion panel content from global currency leaders that you have come to expect from Currency Research. The travel restrictions that are being put in place by many Central Banks and other companies through late spring would have potentially limited these experiences.

We are pleased to announce the new dates for Banknote 2020 will be November 2 through 5. We apologize for this inconvenience, and we look forward to welcoming you to Banknote 2020 and Washington, D.C in November!

Check back for more information shortly.

Best regards,

Shaun Ferrari
